IT'S TRUE. TYPOGRAPHY CAN SAVE LIVES TOO. Messages that make safety cool.

BACKGROUND

A ride, a journey, one hop to another, one destination to the next. Every ride must be an exciting experience. Every journey must be a memory you cherish.

Unfortunately, some rides become a trauma, a tragedy, sometimes bringing the journey to a cruel, grinding halt.

India has one of the highest rates of road accidents related fatalities. Despite enough and more road safety ads and programs targeted towards road safety, especially about wearing helmets, the Indian rider, high on youth and adrenalin, often, if not always ignores them.

The young rider considers the helmet a legal obligation more than a personal responsibility.

Helmets are a chore and a bore people prefer avoiding. Or they think it's for the meek and the weak, helmet-less riding often touted as a sign of machismo and bravado.

Popular culture images, from movies to music videos with leading men riding without a helmet only fuel this false sense of machismo – the film poster of Dedh Ishqiya, a recent example, which shows Naseeruddin Shah and Arshad Warsi riding a scooter without a helmet.

CREATIVE CHALLENGE

How do we use typography to create messages that make helmet wearing a cool act and remind people to do so, every time they ride a bike?

DELIVERABLES

In this day and age where internet has connected the message, the medium and the audience, the possibilities of what you can do with a brief are limitless. Gone are the days where all you could do was a print ad, a tv commercial, a hoarding or a radio spot. Today, everything is a medium, anything can be an idea. As long as it conveys your message. As long as people love to have fun with it, interact with it and share it with others.

So, go ahead, give any shape to your typographic message with this brief. It could be an installation or a cap or a t-shirt, a viral video using kinetic typography, a mobile game or a puzzle! Any of these qualify to be an entry. Why of course, you could just decide to do a superb print ad or a set of posters too!

Just use your imagination and choose a medium and an idea you think works most with the youth of today.
